THE TENEMENT HOUSES. One half of the million of people who make up the great Babel live in what are called tenement houses. You, oh dwelter in the village or in the country, have an idea that a house is a structure of seven to twelve rooms, in the centre of a pretty piece of ground, with flowers, fruits and such things about it, where a child may be born and grow up with decent, healthful surroundings. This is not what 500,000 people in this city know as a house. To them a house means a vast building, four or five stories high, divided into small rooms, the rooms ten feet square, the bed rooms closets. GAS .- Washington City is in gas throes -a bill was introduced the other day by Senator Fenton, for the incorporation of England by 4; Scotland and France by 1 a new Gas Company in that city. The people are smarting under the exactions, ists, and three laborers. The others were arrogance and abuse of their privileges by engineers, book agents, firemen on the present Gas company, and the new project will have a bearty aid and good wishes. No city in the country. Intemperance is by no means confined probably, is so misused in this respect as to the men of New York. Indeed the in Washington. The gas is of inferior
